Undergraduate students may pursue a minor course of study in the Business of Music or Musicology. Students may also design a Minor in Liberal Arts with courses taken on the Homewood campus of The Johns Hopkins University. All minor study is coordinated by the Office of Academic Affairs in consultation with the student's major teacher and the department offering the minor.

While students may begin taking coursework for a minor at their discretion, students may complete the paperwork to declare a minor only after successfully playing a 209 jury. Any minor must be declared before the start of a student's last semester of study. Once the paperwork is completed in the Office of Academic Affairs, the Associate Dean will evaluate the student's requirements and consult with pertinent faculty members before making a final decision to approve the minor course of study.

Some credits may fulfill multiple requirements. Successful completion of a minor does not appear on a diploma but will appear on a transcript.
